

So there I stood, waiting for my turn as people started climbing down from Jacobs Ladder. Now it was my turn..

The instructor came and told me it was my turn. I walked forwards and they helped me strap the harness on. My legs were like jelly, butterflies were in my tummy and my heart started thumping really fast.

Since it was my turn I started climbing the first one; every time I went further the wood gets further apart, so it got harder and harder, on the third one I was stuck. I tried jumping but it didn't work, so I tried jumping higher as I jumped higher I nearly fell. I was terrified, I didn't know if I could go any more.

As I still had 10 more seconds left, I quickly jumped up and made it, but the problem was how will I get down? As the instructor showed me safely how to get down, I was happy I was back on the ground.
