

So there I stood, looking up at the 20ft tower. My heart was racing in my mouth. Being excited, my legs turn into jelly. I needed to do it for the achievement and the quick way down. So I walked to the door then through it and started to climb the ladder.

Finally I got to the top; the wind blew me back and forth like a baby in cradle. Then a lady called Amy gave me two harnesses to clip to me. Next it was time to go down. "Keep your legs together," said Amy "That's it, but keep them straight." I would have answered but my mouth was shivering as was my body. Then DROP! I sat back and slowly lowered myself a step at a time 'Slowly does it' I thought to myself. At this point I felt great, I didn't think it would be so good! I began to get vertigo until I heard chanting of my name, then sped up, well down! I got faster then a small thing touched my feet. THE GROUND! A big cheer layered my ears, "That was great!" I said "I wish I could do it again!" After that I unharnessed myself and breathed a sigh of relief. I felt as light as a feather now the harness was off.

So then I sat down in the hut waiting for the next person to feel the pressure.
